Susan Barron's program, "Darkness and Light" is a series of portraits of people who were forced to leave their homes after the Russian invasion of the Ukraine. Photography and interview material were presented. Both words and images help us bear witness to human suffering.

Susan Baron has worked all over our country. She worked with Veterans with PTSD, compiling mixed media portraits to shine a light on the epidemic of PTSD and suicide through a deeply personal lens. She chose to present some of her material that demonstrates both suffering and the role of people working together to help. She is an exceptional artist whose work has been collected and commissioned all over the country. Her collected artistic stories "demand we bear witness."

Susan Baron studied art and graduated from Boston University. She did graduate work at Yale University. Her mission is to use her talent as way of helping the viewer to empathize with those who suffer.
